DETAILED ACTION

Priority

1. Receipt is acknowledged of papers submitted under 35 U.S.C. 119(a)-(d), which papers have been placed of record in the file.

Specification

2. Applicant is reminded of the proper language and format for an abstract of the disclosure.

The abstract should be in narrative form and generally limited to a single paragraph on a separate sheet within the range of 50 to 150 words. It is important that the abstract not exceed 150 words in length since the space provided for the abstract on the computer tape used by the printer is limited. The form and legal phraseology often used in patent claims, such as "means" and "said," should be avoided. The abstract should describe the disclosure sufficiently to assist readers in deciding whether there is a need for consulting the full patent text for details.

The language should be clear and concise and should not repeat information given in the title. It should avoid using phrases which can be implied, such as, "The disclosure concerns," "The disclosure defined by this invention," "The disclosure describes," etc.

3. The abstract of the disclosure is objected to because it contains legal phraseology including the term "means" in line 14. Correction is required. See MPEP § 608.01(b).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Art Unit: 2832

5. Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent Number 5,115,108 to Ogawa, et al, in view of U.S. Patent Number 6,239,392 to Serizawa, et al.

Ogawa, et al, discloses a switch comprises:

- (1) A housing; (abstract)
- (2) An operating knob, which is pivotally supported on the housing; (abstract) (Column 4, lines 58 & 59)
- (3) A contact wiring board having opposing contact end portions arranged under push bodies; (abstract)
- (4) A rubber switch member interposed between the housing and the contact wiring board and having conductive contact pieces arranged so as to be opposed to the mutually-opposing contact end portions, respectively on the contact wiring board; and switching members in particular, such as rubber buckling portions formed together with the rubber switch member or elastically slidable push members; (abstract)
- (5) A rubber buckling portions of the rubber switch member as click feeling providing members. (abstract)
- (6) Overstroke means, such as the rubber buckling type, by which the rubber buckling portion can be further depressed or buckled a little more stroke even after the contact pieces have been brought into contact with the contact portions. The rubber shape can deformably absorb the difference in stroke between the two rubber buckling portions.

Ogawa, et al, discloses the claimed invention except for the plurality of pressing portions extending from the operating knob.

Serizawa, et al, discloses a switch unit comprising leg portions, which extend from the knob. A contacting member (on the ends of the legs) is positioned on the end portion of the knob. And, when one end portion of the knob is pressed toward the base member, the projection is pressed by the first leg portion while being elastically deformed, whereby the first contacting member comes into contact with the first contact portion. (Column 7, lines 43-49)

One skilled in the art, at the time the invention was made, would have found it obvious to combine the teachings of Ogawa, et al, with the teachings of Serizawa, et al, to extend leg portions from the reverse surface of the operating knob in order to contact the contact portions stationed directly below.
